

Special education can be one of the most rewarding professions in society. Regardless of the position, educating, supporting, teaching and leading in special education is a lifelong focus that is sometimes taken for granted. As educators, we must remember the importance of celebrating our profession and those around us.

Awards and scholarship ceremonies celebrate and show that our specialized work is valued. As an organization, we have an opportunity to recognize those who lead, support, and educate in special education. By recognizing a job well done, it shows appreciation and gratitude for each person's focus and dedication to those they serve. This honor showcases the focus on our profession while announcing to others, such as the general public and other professionals, that we are aware and recognize outstanding accomplishments within our field.
